SOLE ANNEX

Summary of US and EU Sanctions Laws

1. US Sanctions Laws

The US Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Assets Control (the "OFAC") administers a wide range of sanctions programs which prohibit or restrict transactions involving certain countries, entities, and individuals. This includes:

- Geographic-based sanctions which prohibit transactions involving targeted jurisdictions, such as Cuba, Iran, North Korea, Syria and the Crimea region of Ukraine;
- Sectoral sanctions which prohibit or restrict certain types of transactions in specified sectors of Russia (including the energy sector) and Venezuela; and
- List-based sanctions which prohibit transactions with certain individuals, entities and vessels designated by OFAC for one or more of several reasons (e.g., involvement in drug trafficking, human rights abuses, the situation in Crimea, corruption, etc.).

To help implement these programs, the OFAC publishes on its website several lists of individuals, entities and vessels which are subject to US sanctions.

- The primary list is called the list of "Specially Designated Nationals" or "SDNs." This contains the names and identifying information (e.g., dates of birth, addresses, etc.) for thousands of individuals, entities, ships and aircraft who are subject to US sanctions. US Persons generally cannot engage in any transaction with a SDN and must block (freeze) any SDN property and interests in property. SDNs are located in virtually every country, and the list of SDNs can change at any time and without advance notice.
- Another key list is the "Sectoral Sanctions Identification List" or "SSI List." This contains the names of a range of a Russian energy companies and banks, among others. US Persons are restricted from providing certain types of financing, goods, services and technology to SSI List entities. As with the SDN list, the SSI List too can change at any time and without advance notice.

Additionally, the OFAC has established a "50% rule" which applies to both the SDN and SSI Lists. Under the 50% rule, any entity owned 50% or more by a SDN or SSI Listed person is itself automatically considered to be subject to the same sanctions as its parent.

All "US Persons" are required to comply with the OFAC sanctions. This means US citizens, US permanent residents (e.g., green card holders), and any person actually in the United States, as well as entities organized under US law and their foreign branches. US sanctions on Cuba and Iran have an even broader reach: these also extend to non-US entities which are owned or controlled by US Persons (e.g., a non-US subsidiary of a US company).

The US also maintains a range of secondary sanctions that penalize foreign (i.e., non-US) Persons who engage in, among other things, certain types of activities involving Iran, North Korea, Russia. The US asserts that it can impose these secondary sanctions regardless of whether it has jurisdiction over the persons and conduct involved, and regardless of whether the conduct complies with local law.

The penalties for violating US sanctions can be severe, up to and including criminal prosecution. The reputational risks associated violations of US sanctions can also be severe.

EU Sanctions Laws

EU Sanctions Laws are agreed at EU level and implemented through EU Decisions and Regulations (the latter of which have direct effect in all 27 Member States). EU sanctions tend to be agreed per regime, with separate Regulations for each targeting specific policy objectives. Implementation, licensing and penalties for breaches of EU sanctions are managed at national EU Member State level.

EU Sanctions Laws typically include restrictions applicable to certain countries, persons, items, or end-uses. The nature and extent of sanctions restrictions can vary from limited to comprehensive depending on the relevant regime.

EU Sanctions Laws typically prohibit certain dealings, directly and/or indirectly, with EU Sanctioned Persons. The key restrictions in relation to EU Listed Persons are as follows:

- a. A prohibition on making funds or economic resources available, directly or indirectly, to or for the benefit of EU Listed Persons (which can, for example, affect supplies of products and payments); and
- b. The freezing of all funds and economic resources belonging to, or owned, held or controlled by EU Listed Persons (which can, for example, lead to funds received being blocked by banks/requiring licences to un-freeze).

These controls are very broadly defined and interpreted. In particular:

- the prohibitions capture indirect as well as direct dealings, which can impact dealings through third parties, or with a non-listed entity that is owned or controlled by a EU Listed Person (e.g. through majority ownership by a EU Listed Person, or if a EU Listed Person exercises control through other means, such as through a significant minority shareholding or control of the board).
- the concept of "funds" is defined extremely widely in this context and includes financial assets and benefits of every kind (including electronic payments, non-electronic payments and even set-off of funds), with no de minimis threshold.

EU Sanctions Laws apply, in summary:

- (A) within the territory of the EU;
- (B) o any legal person, entity or body incorporated under the laws of an EU Member State (including any non-EU branch offices of such entities), wherever their activities take place;
- (C) to any national of an EU Member State, wherever located or operating; and
- (D) to any legal person, entity or body, wherever located, in respect of any business done in whole or in part within the EU.

Anti-circumvention

Sanctions Laws typically prohibit facilitation, indirect trade, or other attempts to avoid or circumvent the application of sanctions. This includes situations where a party is willfully blind (i.e. chooses not to ask/know) as to the ultimate destination or end-user of its goods, services or technology.
